Woodswoman I Quotes by Anne LaBastille - Goodreads

In a time where most women wouldn't think of being on their own, she went out and built her own cabin in the Adirondacks and lived there alone. And this book is the telling of her first couple years out there, and a little bit of her history before that. With a divorce from her husband in her future, Anne needed to set out and find her own path.

Anne is a gutsy woman who left the crowded and noisy city behind to live alone in a cabin in the Adirondack Mountains of New York State. While careful not to expose her exact location, she perfectly describes mountain living in an easy-flowing writing style. She tells us of the black fly invasions that occur every spring.
